Malik: Yes, we've been on to quite a few parts of the, to the coast near Agadir, to the mountains and to the edge of the desert.

Interviewer: Is it easy to around?

Malik: Yes, it is, especially between the big We went to Marrakesh recently, on the I love trains. The between Casablanca and Marrakesh was built a hundred years ago. It's not very fast, but it's and it's a great way to see the It's a little bit more than the bus, but it's worth it.

Interviewer: Are there special for young people?

Malik: Yes, if you're under 12, you get a ticket.

Interviewer: How long did the take?

Malik: It took 3 hours, 20 minutes.

Interviewer: How is it?

Malik: I think it's just over 200

Interviewer: Have you been on the train yet?

Malik: You mean Al-Boraq? Yes! We went from Casablanca to Tangier. It at 300 kilometres per hour. It's a train: it's got an upper and a lower deck. We went on the upper It was fantastic!

Interviewer: You said you went to the Atlas Mountains. How did you there?

Malik: We went to Marrakesh by train and then we went in a, which we with some other people.

Interviewer: And what about in your day-to-day life. How do you get to school? Do you, do you cycle or do you go by?

Malik: None of those.

Interviewer: Oh.

Malik: No, I use the The trams are really good.

Interviewer: Oh, really? I didn't know there were trams in Casablanca.

Malik: Yes, the tram was opened in 2012 and it was in 2019.

Interviewer: You seem to know a lot about it.

Malik: Well, my parents are both engineers and I'm doing a project on at school.

Interviewer: Ah, that explains it. Well, thank you, Malik, for giving us a very interesting
